Filth and the House Fly.

The estimate that $10,000,000 a year is spent in this country for fly screens is probably not exaggerated. Every person who has equipped his home adequate with screens realizes the expenses. And even why is all this so? Because we are not clean. It is not a pleasant admission to make, but it is none the less true. In too many back yards of residences during the summer season will be found open garbage receptacles. Into these goes a wanton waste of food to form breeding places for the flies which later on poison our fresh food and make us sick.

It is notable that there are fewer flies downtown than there are in the residence districts. Some well kept office buildings are practically clean of them, and screens in such places are almost unknown. This is because the yard affords no place for the fly to breed and nothing for them to eat. Filth and decomposition are necessary for the propagation of flies, and the less there is of this, the fewer flies there will be. If all garbage were kept in tightly covered receptacles and if all filth were cleaned up the decrease in the number of flies would be surprising and there would undoubtedly be a sharp decrease in the summer death rate.

The Two Sinners.

She was a woman, worn and thin, who the world condemned for a single sin. They cast her out of the king's highway, and passed her by as they went to pray. He was a man, more to blame. But the world spared him a breath of shame. Beneath his feet he saw her lie, but he raised his head and passed her by. They were the people who went to pray at the temple of God on the Holy day. They scorned the woman, forgave the man; 'twas ever thus since the world began. Time passed on the woman died; on a cross of shame she was crucified. The world was stern, and would not yield, and they buried her in the potters field. The man died too, and they buried him in a casket of cloth with a silver brim, and said as they turned away, "We have buried a noble man today." Two mortals knocked at heaven's gate, stood face to face to inquire their fate. He carried a passport with an earthly sign, but she a pardon from love divine. Of ye who judge 'twixt virtue and vice, which think ye entered paradise? Not he whom the world had said would win, for the woman was ushered in.—Ex.
